

Globalisation during the Cold War: Culture, New Geopolitics and Che Guevara

November 16, 2015, from 4:30 to 8 pm
at Literaturcafé im Haus des Buches Leipzig, Gerichtsweg 28, 04103 Leipzig

How much was today's world order shaped by the Cold War era and its end? What events represent important caesurae of the East-West conflict? What role did new social, political, and ecological movements, as well as regional and international organisations play in this? And which changes are difficult to explain from a European point of view or are not a direct outcome of the end of the conflict?

Table hosts:

Jens Boysen (Warsaw), Jorge Garzón (Hamburg), Zaur Gasimov (Istanbul), Corinne Geering (Giessen), Beata Hock (Leipzig), Elisabeth Holt (New York), Leslie James (Birmingham), Karena Kalmbach (Berlin), Constantin Katsakioris (Bayreuth), Luc Van Langenhove (Bruges), James Mark (Exeter), Hector Perla Jr. (Santa Cruz), Ned Richardson-Little (Exeter), Quinn Slobodian (Wellesley), Yang-Wen Zheng (Manchester)

The WeberWorldCafé is an interactive, biannual event format of the Max Weber Stiftung and the Forum Transregionale Studien that brings together researchers and practitioners from various disciplines and regions who meet and exchange their thoughts in a relaxed, coffee-house-like atmosphere. We particularly invite students, young scholars and the interested public.

Concept and organisation: Jens Boysen (DHI Warschau), Steffi Marung (Centre for Area Studies Leipzig) and Gesche Schifferdecker (Max Weber Stiftung).
